I just showed it to my 16 year old truecel brother. He thinks the second picture looks hilarious.

Do you think infra and lateral orbital implants will achieve this?

@Wellthatsucks

It's really hard to say, but since even my eyes look a bit less bulgy with the orbital rim/midface implants, I'd say they most likely would look less bulgy. I would probably email a few surgeons and compare the responses you get (at least Dr. Y and Eppley). FWIW, Dr. Y actually invented orbital rim implants, so maybe he can give you a well-informed response. I would ask several other surgeons as well just to get a variety of opinions.

@MudslimeMo it makes me wonder if Tom Cruise's acting career would've ever taken off had that been his real eye area.

Also, is it just me, or does his midface look longer with my shitty ass eye area imposed on it?

BTW, I just saw your latest response you posted a little while ago and just wanted to let you know that I should be able to respond in detail tomorrow or the next day (unfortunately I have to get up earlier than usual for school tomorrow and don't have much time to write one tonight).

I just opened the spoiler tag. You look completely unrecognizable with Tom's eyes. Completely. I think Cruise would have been type cast(ed) as a funny character or the wimp of the group with your eye area. You don't look weak at all though, but that's probably because of your very good jaw and overall good bones.

I see what you mean with the midface appearing longer. I find it kind of unsettling; is a bad eye area really that damaging to aesthetics?!

I know you don't have much time to respond in the other thread. Different time zones. I think it's around 7 PM where you live.

@MudslimeMo I think there are two reasons Cruise's midface looks longer with my eye area: 1.) My combination of NCT and drooping lower eyelids naturally "pulls" the viewer's gaze downwards, almost creating a melting effect to the midface that makes it look longer than it really is; and 2.) The eyes are so painful to look at that the viewer naturally and immediately is provoked to look down at the midface, which also seems to make it look longer than it really is simply because it is being focused on instead of the eye area.

BTW, it's actually around midnight in my area. As a matter of fact, aside from the hassle of getting the finances in order (credit cards, loans, etc.), the other primary issue that makes it difficult to plan all these surgeries is my school and work schedule. I pretty much can't take any time off unless I get sick (and that would only give me 1-2 days off). It also means everything HAS to be in order by early November so that I can be all set to get my eye area overhauled in either late November or early December. I don't even know when I'm going to fit jaw implant surgery with Dr. Y into my schedule... unless he could somehow do just as good of a job at transforming my eye area as Taban, in which case I could get eye surgery + jaw implant surgery with Dr. Y all during the same operation. I really wish I could know for sure whether Taban would be worth paying all the extra $$$ to go to. I agree that some of his before/after results are really impressive, but some of his patients also had fairly underwhelming outcomes.

The destructive effect your eye creates on Cruise's face is profound indeed. I would email it to your surgeon for him to use as a visual illustration of the importance of eye area to prospective patients. Not only does he look completely different, but his entire LIFE would have taken a different turn at some point. A completely different turn. He certainly wouldn't have been the lead actor/focal point of ANY work of art other than for comic relief, let alone a multi-millionaire and a sex symbol. He goes from rich Hollywood actor to incel, beta provider nice guy office drone in a single physical alteration. This should give you encouragement, as you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by having your eyes overhauled. This morph perfectly drives home just how deformed your eye area is. While I still believe a bad eye area is not as bad as being hit by the norwood reaper (past NW2) or a recessed mandible and maxilla simultaneously (it's extremely ugly. Extremely, extremely ugly. Our housemaid has it), it can easily rob you of 1-1.5 PSL points in looks (a 1 PSL point jump is massive). You would go from PSL 5.5 to around PSL 6.5 with Cruise's eye area. If you also had close-set eyes, you would be a PSL 4 instead of 5.5 .

I legitimately can't wait to see YOU with a new eye area, even though I obviously stand to gain nothing.

its easier to change from deformed to normal
then from normal to slayer

i stay with my point: not possible via surgery
